Cerveira Bead
(Municipal Jewel)

Replica of a Suebi–Visigothic bead, 6th century

the Identity of Cerveira

Vila Nova de Cerveira's boundless cultural creativity now has a new symbol of identity, rooted in a historic past and looking towards a promising future: the Cerveira Bead – Municipal Jewel.

A symbol of social status, the original archaeological piece (6th century) stands out for its rarity, authenticity and elegance — qualities rigorously respected in the gold and silver replicas, conceived by the Municipality of Vila Nova de Cerveira and sold exclusively by local jewellers.

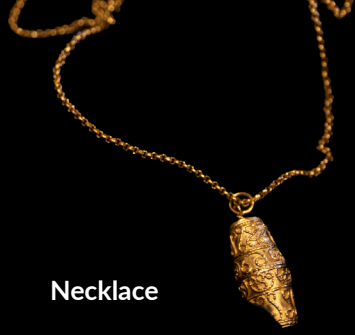

Rare, as the closest comparable beads known in the Iberian Peninsula are two from gold twisted-wire earrings: one from Daganzo de Arriba (Madrid), housed in the Spanish National Archaeological Museum (6th century), and another from Torre Dondimen (Jean), preserved in the Archaeological Museum of Barcelona (6th century).

Authentic, as it was discovered in 1985 during excavations at the Lovelhe Archaeological Site, in Vila Nova de Cerveira, by the renowned archaeologist Carlos Brochado de Almeida, revealing the presence of a civilisation in the north-western Iberian Peninsula.

Elegant in its dimensions and materials: small (3 cm long and 1.5 cm wide), light (8.5 g), yet of incalculable historical value. With a bitruncated conical form, it is composed of 95% gold and 5% silver and iron, unevenly distributed.

At the fascinating intersection of past and present, history meets progress, and the sharing of heritage becomes a vital way to transmit this cultural legacy down across generations.
